Movie Review

Hot Shots hits the mark

By Lawson Oates and Dawn Wood

Hot Shots! Part Deux, starring Charlie Sheen, is the second parody of Sylvester Stallone's Rambo action movies. Thankfully, director Jim Abraham has been able to carry the yuks and slapstick for an hour-and-a-half without them getting stale.

Following the Rambo formula, Sheen (playing the role of Topper) is pulled out of retirement at the request of the U.S. President to lead a hostage rescue mission in Saddam Hussein's Iraq. In his early retirement, Sheen has settled down at a Buddhist Monk's retreat where he fixes wheels and kick boxes in his spare time. Of course, there is the requisite female accompaniment played by Valeria Golino and Brenda Blake.

Charlie Sheen has certainly established himself as the heir to Hollywood musclemen such as Stallone. A nice tribute (and a parody on a parody) is a mid-river meeting with his father, Martin Sheen, in his Apocalypse Now role.

Hot Shots! is a great tonic for our lagging winter blues and a great start for a summer that promises to be upbeat, retrospective and tongue-in-cheek.
