POOL & SPA Tips

Spa Care Tips #2

Special Problems

Hot water is the perfect breeding ground for certain types of common bacteria. If left untreated, these bacteria could cause skin rash and general irritation to bathers. Keeping the water properly treated with regular sanitation, proper pH and shock treatments prevents bacteria build up.

If the water smells bad, is cloudy, or generally looks bad, it may be time for a general cleaning. Residential spas require draining about every three months. Clean with Spa/Tub Cleaner to remove greases and oils which accumulate on the side. Thoroughly clean the filter with Filter Cleaner and Degreaser and rinse both the spa and filter with a chlorine solution.

- Balance spa water with normal circulation only, no aeration.
- Test frequently with reliable test kit.
- Check pH before using spa and adjust pH if necessary. Adjust again 1/2 hour after use.
- Check chlorine or bromine frequently. It's a good idea to shock the spa after each use with BioGuard® Spa Shock™.
- Keep spa clean with BioGuard® Surface Cleaner. Clean filter regularly with Filter Cleaner and Degreaser.
