

Giving blood can save a life

Whenever Sandra Cressman looks at her baby daughter she beams with happiness. She's so proud to be a new mother. If it weren't for blood donors, these warm moments between mother and daughter would not have been possible.

At the age of 10, Sandra was diagnosed with chronic active hepatitis which was destroying her liver. During her teen years, she felt tired and was always prone to getting sick. By the time she reached 21, her spleen had to be removed to reduce complications from her liver disease. That was when Sandra had her first blood transfusion.

It took her almost a year to recuperate from her surgery. But, feeling better, she went back to work as a retail store manager. During her commute home from work, Sandra met her future husband, John, who happened to be the bus driver. With John's love and support, Sandra learned never to let her illness overwhelm their lives, even though her doctors had said she wouldn't live past the age of 30.

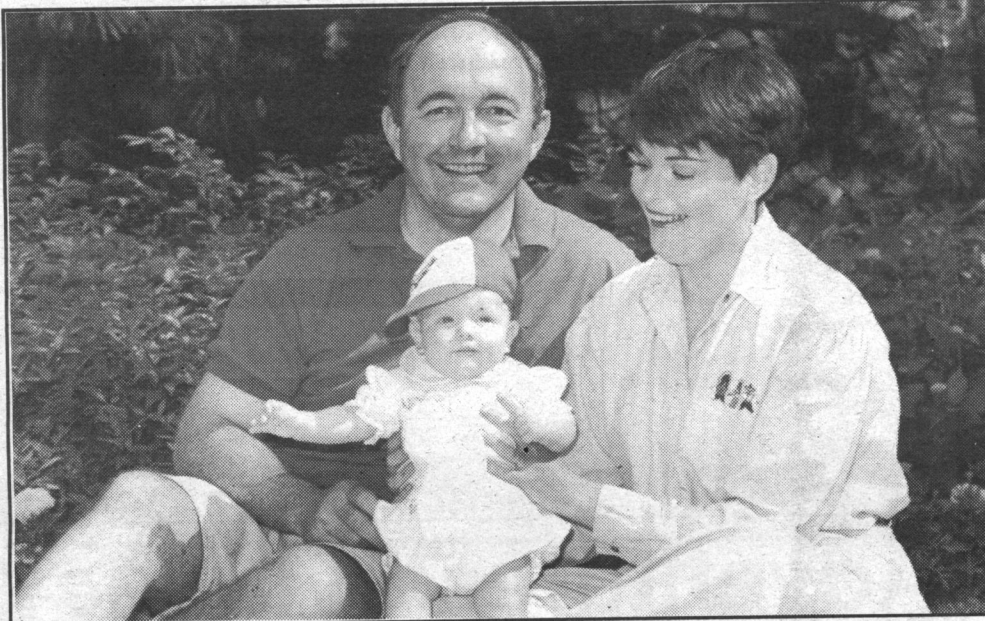

In August of 1987 she received a life-saving liver transplant at Toronto General Hospital. "My operation lasted 13 hours and I needed so much blood - about 100 units," says Sandra. "But it was such a relief, I felt like a new person afterwards. My transplant would not have been possible without blood from dedicated donors."

Sandra felt healthy and so confident, she and her husband decided to have a child. Six months ago, their baby daughter, Sarah Lynn, was born.

The next Red Cross blood clinic in Halton Hills is scheduled for Monday, August 9, from 1:30-8:30 p.m. at Holy Cross Church on Maple Avenue in Georgetown.
