Quilt fest underway

By Oksana Buhel

Quilters from across Canada and the United States are flocking to the Country Quilt Fest, being held at the Ontario Agricultural Museum in Milton, both to see and to show.

The festival, which began yesterday (Friday) and will continue until next Sunday (Aug. 15) is co-sponsored by the Hobby Horse Quilting Shop in Glen Williams, and will include quilting displays, competitions and a fashion show.

Gail Spence, owner of the Hobby Horse, said this is the third time her shop has co-sponsored the event. "I've already received a call from a lady in Alberta and last year we had people from California," Spence boasted.

Spence has something else to boast about. The Hobby Horse Quilting Shop will have two quilts at the festival, which members of the public can help stitch. When completed, both quilts will be donated to the Bennett Health Care Centre in Georgetown. Spence explained both lap quilts have a pine tree pattern, which "will fit well with notion of the Bennett Centre." She added another reason for the pattern was the translation of "Esqueing Township" - land of the big pines.
