A welfare state will go bankrupt

turer, I understand how government has driven industry (my customers) and jobs from Canada. As president of a North American association representing my industry, I can compare my government with those of other countries and see where we are going wrong.

As an employer of people from all walks of life and nationalities, I see their paycheques raped by government at all levels. Government that forces me and other employers to take money away from those who have truly earned it. Government that says it is "helping" them while taking away their money, freedom and security at an unprecedented rate.

As a Canadian, I have seen a once prosperous, peaceful country with opportunities and a future for everyone become a welfare state that is bankrupt in only 30 years.

The only way meaningful change can be made through the political system is to support those who follow written principles, not policies that change with each election or meeting of the party

Hilliard Cox

sector;
in power.
Assuming the current structure of government remains in place, a Libertarian government would take the following "first steps"

- Eliminate all areas of government that overlap each other as the beginning of an overall downsizing operation;

- Scrap all subsidies and tax benefits to political parties and their candidates;

- Stop all programs "downloading" where the federal government creates a program (and gets the glory) that lower levels of government must tax for and administer;

- Restore private property rights to protect individuals and the environment from government bungling and confiscation;

- Set fixed budgets for each of the few ministries remaining after a Libertarian downsizing operation. The ministers and head civil servants would be responsible for maintaining those budgets or lose their jobs just like executives in the private

- Stop all grants, tax concessions, loans and regulatory advantages that gives one group or industry special privileges not enjoyed by everyone else.

These steps would be the beginning. Libertarians have many more ideas to cut waste, spending, taxes and government.

Brochure on the way

The Recreation and Parks Department Fall and Winter Brochure should be distributed by this weekend. Please note the deadline date to receive registrations for lottery processing of fall programs is still Sept. 3 at noon.

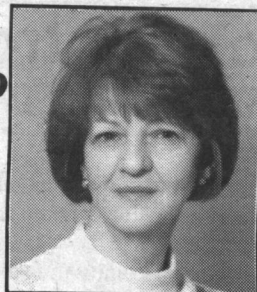

The brochure will be available for pick-up after this weekend Post Offices in Huttonville, Cheltenham, Terra Cotta and Ballinafad; EWAG Centre in Erin; General Stores in Ospringle, Speyside, Hornby and Norval; the Royal Bank in Rockwood and IGA in Hillsburgh. Copies will also be made available at local arenas, pools, libraries, Acton Hydro Office and other municipal facilities.

Wrong number

In last Wednesday's edition of HHTW, the story "New transportation Convenor at Cancer Society" mistakenly included Doreen Whittaker's home telephone number. Whittaker asks that any cancer patients requiring transportation for treatment not call her at home, but call the Canadian Cancer Society, Halton Hills Unit (877-1124) between the hours of 1-5 p.m., Monday to Friday, or the Halton Hills Distress Centre (877-1211) at any other time.
