The Three Musketeers - Fun for All Movie Review

By Lawson Oats and Dawn Wood
Special to HHTW

All for one and one for all! The age of chivalry, honor and swashbuckling returns in Disney's production of the Alexandre Dumas classic, The Three Musketeers.

Starring Charlie Sheen, Chris O'Donnell, Oliver Platt and Kiefer Sutherland, this action-packed and visually engaging movie will have you rooting for the good guys from start to finish.

The storyline is neat and straight forward. Young D'Artagnan, played by Chris O'Donnell of Scent of a Woman fame, heads for Paris to find his fame and fortune. Plagued by the mystery of his father's death, he wants to be (in his father's footsteps) a member of the King of France's elite bodyguard; The Musketeers.

Along the way he manages to draw the wrath of the last three Musketeers: Aramis (Sheen), Athos (Sutherland), and Porthos (Platt). In a matter of a few hours, young D'Artagnan has three duels on his hands, not to mention some bad company from the old neighborhood.

Fortunately, larger events fall in D'Artagnan's favor. A palace coup is underway and the Musketeers have been disbanded, except for Aramis, Athos, and Porthos, who stubbornly vow to honor their pledge to protect the King with their lives.

When the bad guys show up to mop up the three hold-outs, D'Artagnan is given the opportunity to show the guys he has the right stuff. Talk about male bonding.

The bad guys are led by the sinister Cardinal Richelieu, played by Tim Curry, who absolutely relishes the role. Curry's most well known role is Rank N. Furter, from the Rocky Horror Picture Show. Richelieu's henchman is Rochefort, played by Michael Wincott (Prince of Thieves).

When we aren't engaged by the almost never-ending swashbuckling we are highly entertained by the witty banter of Pratt, last seen in the matter-of-fact lawyer in Indecent Proposal. Pratt clearly enjoys his role and carries the movie for the almost comatose Sheen and Sutherland.

P.S. The title song, All For Love, is a Bryan Adams, Rod Stewart and Sting collaboration.

Mother Goose characters a blend of old and new

By Peter Roe
GLT Publicity

A lot of fresh faces and fresh talent will adorn the stage of the John Elliott Theatre this Christmas in Georgetown Little Theatre's homegrown production of Mother Goose.

Joining the familiar faces of Paul d'Entremont (most recently completing The Foreigner), Tiffany Dunn (Best of Friends) and Derek Remes (Scrooge, Cinderella) are Frqnk McKie, Stephen Lima, Kerry Wright and Jennifer Burrill.

Frank has been with GLT for many seasons, but has always contributed to our productions backstage. This time he's in the spotlight, playing none other than the villainous Baron of Ballinafad! Stephen is no stranger to the stage. In fact, he has played Ellard Simms in Brampton's Little Theatre production of The Foreigner and Lenny Small in the classic Of Mice and Men.

Anyone who has seen the television shows Paper Heart or Night Heat or watched the film Sing, might remember Kerry, whose last stage appearance was the female lead, Marjorie in Stageplay Productions' Extremities. Jennifer too, has been quite active in the theatre, having been involved with this art for nine years. She has worked with Globe Productions, Centennial School Productions and DGHS Productions. Now Jennifer's with GLT and you will have your chance to see hers and everyone's work shine in the delightful children's show, Mother Goose!
