

From retiring to volunteering

Retirement is said to be the time when you have finished your prescribed hours of working and you now have time to think back through all the things you would like to have done. Now is the time to do them! The experience of volunteering can add an interesting new dimension to your retirement.

Volunteering is done for a variety of reasons. Senior volunteers cite "personal satisfaction" most often as the reason for pursuing volunteer interests. Other reasons include the opportunity to socialize and the need for one to feel he/she is making a contribution.

Feeling good about what you are doing may also have other significant benefits. Research has proven that performing volunteer work, more than any other activity, drastically increases life expectancy. In fact, it is believed that men who volunteer at least once per week will likely live 2-1/2 times longer than the non-volunteering male.

Of course, taking the initiative to volunteer is something you do on your own. For those who rarely leave home, this task can be monumental. But volunteer work can also be done from your home. The rewards of volunteering are many - new friends, new interests, rekindled interests, improved self-esteem and vitality.

Retirement can be a satisfying reward for your years of toil. You owe it to yourself to make the most of it.

Volunteering may add to your sense of self-fulfillment. Call Acton Social Services and Information Centre at 853-3310 or drop in to ASSIC at 19 Willow St. North, Acton to find out more about volunteering in your community. We can afford you a variety of volunteering in your community. We can offer you a variety of volunteer experiences, the possibilities are endless.
