Star-gazing puppeteers

The Acton Baptist Puppeteers have been working hard on their newest musical production, "Journey to the Centre of Christmas". The Acton Baptist Puppeteers are a group of 13 talented Acton teenagers. Many of them have been working together for four years, developing and perfecting their puppetry skills. Under the direction of Rev. Tom Cullen, this is their sixth full length musical.

"I have never worked with a more energetic and creative group of people" said Cullen. "Their imagination knows no limits."

In choosing their material, the team tries to look for musicals that are fast-paced and appealing to children. "But," adds Cullen. "the adults always come away saying, 'I think I enjoyed that show as much as little Johnny or Susie'."

This year's show has a "Star Trek" theme. The audience is invited to join Captain Josh and his fellow time travelers on a search for the centre of Christmas. With the help of their friends from the past, the Starship crew discovers the real reason for Christmas is to celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ, our Savior.

As well as the wonderful life-like puppets that have become the trademark of the puppet team, they have added some special black light puppets to this year's show. "Journey to the Centre of Christmas" is for three nights only, Dec. 10, 11 and 12 at 7 p.m. at Acton Baptist Church. Admission is $4 for adults, $2 for children.

Acton Baptist Church is located at the corner of Mill and Elgin Streets in Acton. For more information, call Rev. Cullen at 853-0690.

The Halton Hills Cultural Centre Art Gallery, located at 9 Church Street in Georgetown, will be exhibiting the paintings of Acton resident, Maria Sallay.

The exhibition and sale will begin with an opening reception this Tuesday, from 6:30-8:30 p.m. After the first show, the exhibition will be held during regular library hours until Dec. 19.

Approximately 45 of Sallay's original watercolor and oil paintings will be on display for the public to view and purchase. Sallay is looking forward to seeing people at the Cultural Centre Gallery to view and enjoy her work.

Sallay has been a resident of Acton for six years. She has done several exhibitions, including the Acton Fair in 1991 and has become well known for her paintings. Sallay has been painting "almost all her life" and did several shows when she lived in Montreal.

Sallay finds inspiration for her paintings through her own efforts (gardening) and looking at the beautiful scenery in Halton Hills.

She enjoys painting a great deal and has her own private gallery in her own home with all her paintings.
