

Georgetown's Holy Cross School elementary school teachers and students delivered $1,400 worth of toys to the Love in Christ Foodbank for needy children just before Christmas. They purchased the toys by collecting Canadian Tire coupons.

December - Fish habitat study costly

With the Acton fish habitat study already $170,000 over budget, Halton Region had been looking for agencies to fund the first month's fee of $32,000.

During a Dec. 15. special meeting of the regional planning and public works committee, committee members discussed how the $32,000 fee for the first of a nine-month fish habitat study in Black Creek will be divided. Agencies which share vested interest in the project included the Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO), Department of Environment (DOE), Ministry of Energy and the Environment (MOEE), Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR), Credit Valley Conservation Authority (CVCA), Halton Region, Town of Halton Hills and private developers. At the meeting, all benefiting owners and public agencies informed Halton Region of the degree they are willing to commit financially to enable the first month's study, from Jan. 3 to 31, to proceed. At a Dec. 13 Town of Halton Hills council meeting, municipal treasurer Andy Koopmans was directed to come up with an "appropriate amount" which the town will contribute to the study, and report back to council Jan. 10.

If the full $270,000 is not raised, the region will have to "make a new decision," according to Councillor Marilyn Serjeantson, chair of the planning and public works committee. The region set aside an additional $100,000 for an audit of the sewage treatment plant. "This does not include any possible retrofitting," Serjeantson pointed out.

Cops after students

The Halton Regional Police were out to get the Georgetown District High School Rebels boys hockey team..... Don't worry, the boys and girls in blue weren't chasing the Rebs in the streets, but rather on the ice. The police shinny artists challenged the Rebels hockey team along with some teachers, Dec.16 at Memorial Arena in a charity game for the Kinsmen Toys for Tots Christmas program. Sponsored by Subway and Zellers. Each person who purchased a ticket received a free six-inch sub from Subway. Steve McDonald of the Halton Regional Police said the police were totally behind the community event and hopefully the game can become an annual event.

The police pucksters had little trouble with the Rebels, handcuffing the GDHS squad 8-4.
