

Old enough to be a classic?

Was reading the Newslink published for the seniors in Erin and came across "I don't think of myself as old, I think of myself as a classic."

The word classic reminded me of the classic cars we saw when we were in Hamilton. There was this beautiful old Hudson which we greatly admired and, while walking around it I saw a hand-embroidered sign on the inside left-hand side of the windshield. I looked at it, admiring the handiwork and then looked again; and who wouldn't because it read "Next to sex I love my Hudson best." Naturally I looked around for the owner and figured it would be a young lad but he wasn't, he was "A Classic."

When I was young, I lived in Port

Arthur (now part of Thunder Bay) on the Oliver Road which leads to the cemetery. Whether you were walking or driving a car when a funeral went past, you either stopped walking or pulled over to the side of the road until the hearse and the family cars passed by. Maybe you didn't know the family but it was a sign of respect. But in today's hustle and bustle, I guess it's gone by the board — just like a lot of other respectful courtesies.

I have noticed drivers don't stop to allow a funeral procession from the funeral home free entry onto Mill Street and then again, I wonder why there's never a policeman at the corner to direct the traffic. Maybe I'm over-reacting and I'm still of the old school in that respect.

A group of us went bowling last Saturday night and what a pleasure it was to see how Dave has changed the lanes — new balls, new pins and refinished lanes. I'm sure it will inspire us to become better bowlers.

By the way, Eric, here's a definition for you. Bowling Alley: a place where you hear a pin drop with enthusiasm.

TEAM support is help that makes difference

During school-year 1991 to 1992, two young mothers graduated from the Acton TEAM program while several students completed courses towards their high school diplomas. This month, the program is underway again and TEAM staff look forward to another exciting school year.

Are you a young mother who wants to go back to school but can't find child care? Why not join TEAM?

Teen Education and Motherhood

(TEAM) enables pregnant teenagers and young mothers to finish their education in a friendly and supportive environment. The students, using independent learning materials, are able to work at their own pace with teaching staff who are available to help them with any problems or concerns. In the meantime, "the tots" are cared for on-site by experienced, child care workers. At TEAM these little ones are given the chance to socialize and learn with other young children.

Grades 9 to 12 courses offered at TEAM include English, Math, Consumer Studies, and Personal Life Management. There is no charge for daycare or classes and this program is offered in Acton and Georgetown.

To learn more about the program or to register, call Acton Social Services and Information Centre, 853-3310 or visit Donna at our office located at 19 Willow St. N. Acton. Georgetown students can register by calling Alma, care of the Georgetown YMCA at 877-8201.

Approximately 150 family members and friends gathered to help Wallace and Irene Swackhamer celebrate 50 years of marriage on Sunday, Sept. 6. Guests included a sister from Ottawa, and other visitors from Chatham, London and Milton. (Jim Warrington photo)
