THE WRATH OF GRAPES

WITH DON CHERRY

The Mighty Ducks?

I know a lot of people dislike the name "Mighty Ducks" for a hockey team, and while I have to admit it doesn't have the ring of the Boston Bruins, it's okay by me. After all, the name Pittsburgh Penguins doesn't inspire me, and they seem to do alright.

Locked out again

How about poor Mike Greene, a humble locksmith who lives in Côte St. Luc, Quebec, where less than five per cent of the community speaks French. He has to spend $518 for an advertisement in English and another $518 for the same ad in French. In the words of Gilles-Louis Docine, an official of "de langue française" (language police), "it's the law, quite simply."

Troubled times for Rangers

How do the New York Rangers go from first place overall to fighting for a playoff spot? Look no further than the injuries to Turcotte, Patrick, Wells, Leetch and Messier. When you have the most valuable player in the league hobbled by injuries all year, and you have the Norris Trophy winner out most of the year, you know that the power play isn't going to work, special teams aren't going to click and that alone is the difference between first and fourth. But a strange thing happened with their goalies. In '91-'92, their goalies, Vanbiesbrouk and Richter, were one of the best duos in the league, but for some reason, both decided to change masks. I'm not saying this is the reason why they turned into sieves, but I'm sure it didn't help. In other words, "if it isn't broke, don't fix it."
