

ASSIC worker honoured for work with students

An ASSIC community support worker was recognized with an award for her outstanding service to Acton's student summer jobs program Monday.

Lin Sallay was given the award by Bill Keay, supervisor at the Canada Employment Centre for Students, who praised her for helping at least 25 Acton students get work this summer.

"It's so nice when you meet someone who is so eager to help others," said Keay. "She operates a sub-office in Acton for us, and this is on top of her other duties." Sallay, who has worked at ASSIC three years, was praised by Keay for registering Acton students, keeping job information up to date and providing students with job interview and resume skills.

"It's been harder in Acton for students because of the Hide House closing," said Keay, adding that this year high school students were competing with adults and university students for scarce jobs.

"We had a very good year, and Lin has helped make it a successful year," he said.

Sallay was happy with the award. "This year the program has been more effective than other years, and more attentive, with regular faxing of job orders."

Program helps seniors keep independence

Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) has financial assistance available to help seniors live as independently as possible and remain in their own homes longer.

CMHC's Home Adaptations for Seniors' Independence (HASI) program provides grants of up to $2,500 for minor adaptations that will extend the time senior citizens can live in their own homes.

Available to those 65 and over who may have difficulty with daily living activities due to diminishing abilities, HASI grants cover the cost of materials and labour necessary to make required adaptations.

For further information, call the CMHC Kitchener office at 519-571-6666.

King boss McNall gets crowned after loss

Wayne Gretzky really dropped a bombshell during the interview with Ron MacLean after the Los Angeles Kings lost to the Montreal Canadiens in this year's Stanley Cup hockey playoffs. Ten minutes after the game, Wayne was in his suit, saying he might not be back with L.A., something he also said in his press interview.

Bruce McNall (who really is a good guy) was in shock when, following the Kings' loss, he hollered after Wayne but Wayne walked by him without a glance.

Then Bruce talked to Janet (Jones) Gretzky, saying "What's going on?"

Poor Kirk Muller. When he got up to speak with his dad at the press conference, there were only four reporters left to talk to, as the press had all trailed after Wayne, wanting more information on the bombshell of "I'm not sure I'll be in L.A. this year."

More on this saga in next week's paper, when I'll tell you why Wayne's unhappy, and where (it's rumoured) he'd like to end up playing out his career.

And it's not Toronto ...
