To fight ... or not to fight?

I remember when I was one of the coaches for the Canada Cup. I could not believe the welts on the players bodies after playing the Russians. They were masters with the sword, (and I'm referring to their sticks.) No fights though, and again the bleeding hearts say "see what great hockey there is in the Canada Cup, and there's no fights"

They just don't get it. Where there is no tussles, you get the stick. For example, if you stick me and I can't drop the gloves and settle things up with you, I'm going to wait in the weeds and stick you.

All you have to do is watch US college hockey where fighting is not allowed and the stick work is scary.
