THE WRATH OF GRAPES

WITH DON CHERRY

These guys really paid

Well, the NHL lockout hurt a lot of people, and even though you might not believe it, some of the players were really hurt by it.

Guys who were hurt the most? How about Dino Cicerelli, the 30-something scorer (and Maple Leaf nemesis) with the Red Wings. Dino is making $1.5 million, which largely went down the tubes — and that's almost a year gone off his remaining talent, never to be returned.

Or Craig McTavish, who's making more money than ever in his career ($850,000) and he only has a year or two left. And maybe no more years after this season! Sometimes when you take off so much time, especially when you're in your 30s, you can't get your level of play back.

Derek King is another guy who finally hit the jackpot after earning peanuts for years. He gets a million dollar contract and then the lockout hits!

These are the type of guys who were hurt the most.

Golfers ... DID YOU KNOW?
 with Len Dodds

GRIPS, PART II: As stated in Part I, the grip provides you with your only physical contact with the golf club. Therefore, it is important you have the proper grip size. Properly-sized grips give the golfer a comfortable feeling at address, positive control during the swing and do not inhibit wrist action. If the club (grip) doesn't feel right in your hand, then it obviously won't feel good as you make a swing.

The standard rule in selecting grip size is that when the anchor hand is on the grip (left hand for right-handed players and right for lefties) the ring and middle fingers should be no more than 1/16th of an inch away from the base of your hand. If they are further away, the grip is too large. If your fingernails are digging into your palm, the grip is too small.

Many golfers are not aware that grips can be installed in different sizes and that different variations of grip sizes are possible under the left vs. the right hand.

When you next have your clubs regripped, take time to evaluate grip size.
