York University last summer and played on the '94 Provincial winning Waterloo Tigers club team.

"I'm a confident player this year. I'm confident in how my teammates are going to play and confident we won't have breakdowns," she explains.

A confidence builder for Olsen through the season was her close relationship with her teammates on and off the court. She notes that all the players are friends and when they hit the court, they're there to play.

"I wanted to select someone who's been a team player," McKay says in explaining his all-star selection. "and no doubt it's her. She's a cheerleader at practice, is constantly encouraging the players and she even organized a Christmas party for the team."

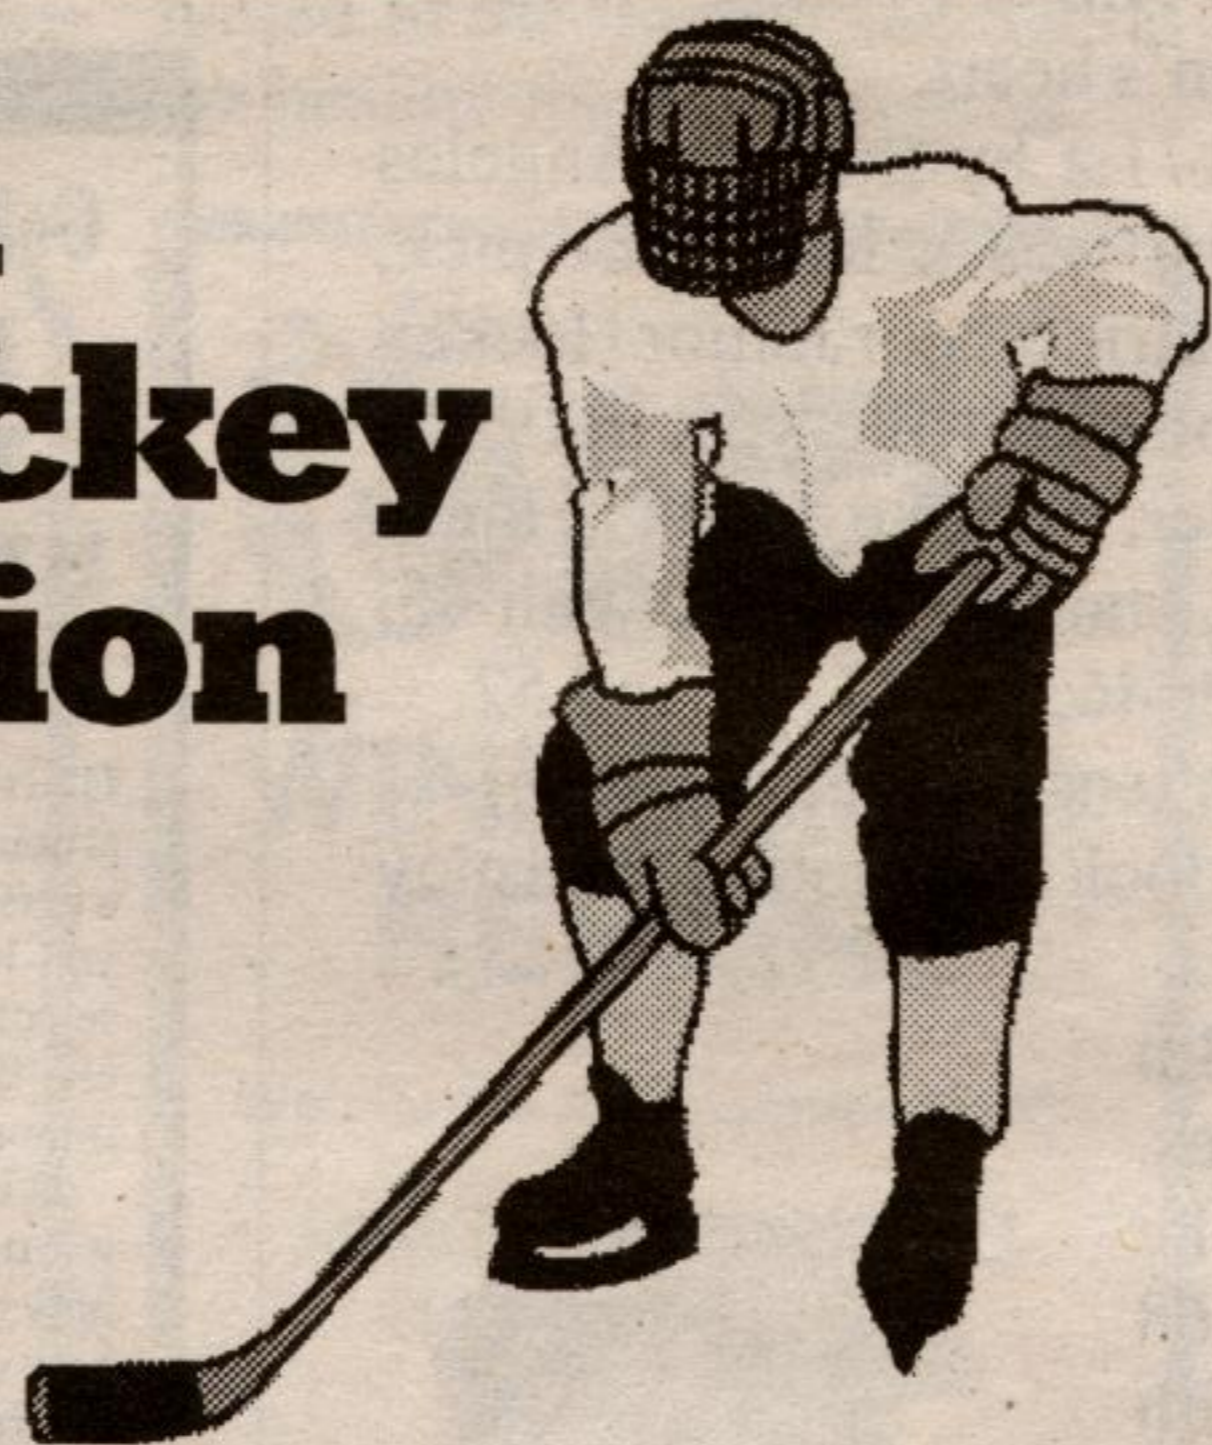

"She leads by a number of qualities, but her interest in the kids and their well-being is paramount. Our ship would be floundering without her. She's just a marvellous young leader."

Olsen, who will enjoy one more year with the Redmen, has been courted by Georgian College volleyball coach Brad Graham and is considering suiting up for the Barrie school in two years as a setter, "because I'm too short (5-foot-7) for university ball."

"I've always been told to be a setter, because I'm short. But I would like to improve that part of my game," Olsen stated, adding she's throwing around the possibility of studying law enforcement.
