The St. Joseph's Girls' basketball team has advanced to the Halton separate school semifinal.

However, it's not the local Lakers outfit, but rather their namesakes from Oakville.

Playing on a full court at St. Marguerite d'Youville last Tuesday in Oakville, the Lakers — accustomed to their own three-quarter size court — could never get comfortable in the 38-16 loss.

The sight of a giant-like centre rejecting their every move around the net didn't help, either.

"Every chance we had under the net, she was there," Lakers coach Kevin Harkin says of the imposing Oakville player.

"The size difference of the court made enough of a difference that the girls were amazed at all the room they had."

It didn't benefit them, though, as Oakville built a significant second-quarter lead they would never relinquish.

The two teams played to a rare scoreless draw in the first quarter.

In his three years behind the Lakers bench, his first with the girls, Harkin says he has never witnessed a 0-0 tie.

The locals did flirt with the dubious honour earlier this year when they doubled Our Lady of Victory 4-2 after the first 10 minutes.

"If we played them in our own gym, it would have been a totally different game," continues Harkin, who guided the North-Halton champion Lakers to a 7-1 regular-season record.

"The girls got down and because of the open court, they were passing the ball all around the court. If we played them again we could beat them."

The Lakers exceeded their coach's expectations this season.

Harkin points out their mastering of the triangle two defensive system — two guards playing man coverage, while the centre and forwards stay in a zone — and an offensive game plan designed to create holes and get the ball inside by working the ball around the perimeter.

"They stuck with it, and that won them games," notes Harkin. "We also had depth on the bench. I'm proud of the girls. They deserved to go further."
