Police officers welcomed

The ranks of the Halton Regional Police Service (HRPS) swelled by nine Friday, with two new constables being assigned to patrol Halton Hills.

The new constables were welcomed to the service in a ceremony held at the Council Chambers at the Halton Regional Centre in Oakville.

Three of the constables are joining Halton Regional Police after serving on other police forces, and six are recent graduates from Ontario Police College in Aylmer.

Joining 11 Division are

Const. Sean Hann and Const. Roger Wilkie.

Hann stated with HRPS in August of this year. He had previously worked as a court officer in Metropolitan Toronto. Prior to that he had been a constable with York Regional Police service. Hann is married and currently resides in Whitby.

Wilkie has been a resident of Burlington for the past seven years, where he attended Nelson High School and later continued his education at Brock University where he studied psychology and criminology. After graduating in 1995, Wilkie worked as a residential counsellor in a group home for developmentally challenged adults and as a volunteer with the HRPS Victim Services Unit.

In his free time, Wilkie enjoys running, weight training and playing many sports. Wilkie is active in the community with his fiancée and will be married in May, 1997.

Both P.C. Hann and P.C. Wilkie are assigned to uniformed patrol in Acton and Georgetown.
