As the village of Campbellville celebrates its 85th anniversary, it is sure to take the time to remember bygone days, a time when farm folk pulled together, and the spirit and spirit. And for a time baseball was King in a tiny village. As a form of organized recreation, Campbellville got going. Throughout the summer, local boys took a little time of their own, and natural skill and dedication soon provided the impetus for a team. The Depression put a damper on play for some years, but Campbellville picked up the ball and brought the ball game back. Scheduled as playtime, when the crack of a wooden bat and the well-oiled glove drew record crowds of fans. And just when it happened to a certain group of young players - some of them that was virtually unstoppable. In a very "David and Goliath" manner, a club that won over all the larger towns and cities in the area. Campbellville was still a modest spot, when all roads led to it just before the 401 roared through.

Residents flocked by the thousands to watch the game. The baseball team became so well known, large crowds supported them. To them, the historic Campbellville baseball club represented a richly rewarding rural lifestyle.
