birthday since its inception as a police village, many are of a simpler life amidst the beauty of a rural setting. It was a community sheltered each other with love, determination and a will that could hold its own against any competition. It grabbed hold of baseball in the early 20's and didn't let go. It wanted to catch linedrives and whack a few over the fence. Their desire for the team to join with the Halton Baseball Association. It waited years, but in the late 1940's a few farsighted men in the village loved sport back into play. Soon Sunday afternoons were filled with excitement and the thunk of a ball nicely snugged in the pocket of a catcher's mitt like scenes from a Hollywood movie, something magical and divine grace that made their energy blend to form a team. In a "holiath" way, the Campbellville boys were a small community - and kept on winning. This, too, in a time when the roads leading to the village were Township Lines and Sideroads, it was the glory days of the local boys. The legend of Campbellville's baseball supported their favourites in style with their admission fees. It represented everything that was good about the village and its
