Kids enjoyed trying to win prizes at the midway.

The petting zoo proved to be popular with kids and their parents. The zoo included a whole cast of animal creatures: a big-toothed donkey, a long-necked llama, a discriminating goat with discerning tastes. All of them were around for people to enjoy at the Milton Fall Fair.

Charlie Tilt, president of the Milton Fair Board, had something to crow about at the Milton Fall Fair. Here he is proudly showing off his prize winning Partridge Cochin Rooster to little Tamara Koletic of Campbellville. The bird placed first overall in its category. Three-year-old Tamara got to pet the rooster as Charlie educated her about the finer points of poultry management.

Evelyn Oates takes special pride in showing some of the floral arrangements on display at the Milton Fall Fair. Evelyn, who is an associate director with the Fair Board and a past president, enters the flower show each year. As a way to match this year's theme of Dairy Days, some participants in the flower show used pots with pictures of cows or china cow figurines such as the one Evelyn is holding. The fair attracted 194 entries for its flower show this year

Jayne Laari, a 16-year-old Mississauga resident, came to the Milton Fall Fair to compete in a horse jumping event with her equine friend, Matilda. Matilda, like the woman from the famous Aussie tune, is as graceful as a dancer.

The demolition derby, one of the most popular events each year at the Milton Fall Fair, draws large crowds to see cars as they smash against other vehicles.
