Burlington's ghostly past

By ANN KORNUA

Patrick Cross is a dedicated paranormal investigator who invites the general public to discover for themselves Burlington's haunted past on his Burlington Ghost Walks. From June 12 to November 6 in the early evenings people come out to discover ghosts and spirit hosts at Emma's Back Porch located at 2084 Old Lakeshore Road where 200 years of history creep back to life in the two hour tour lead by Patrick and his team of investigators and guides. The authenticity of the tour is based on historical reports and stories of the unexplained events that have happened in the City of Burlington and the surrounding areas.

"We're really popular because our stories are accurately laid out from detailed information on the area spanning from the 1700's to now. We cover famous people who used to live here such as Joseph Brant and Laura Secord and many of the haunted areas," Patrick says.

Patrick and his team are always hard at work looking into new stories from around the area. Patrick himself is one of the top parapsychologists and ghost researchers in his field having been featured on Creepy Canada TV series and Discovery Channel.

Usually it's an adult crowd that turns out for the spooky tours and people from as far as the USA have traveled to Burlington just to walk on Patrick's Ghost Tour. Most of Patrick's advertising is done on a website which features pictures, stories and history from the tours themselves.

To take the tour and experience Burlington at its spookiest, call 416-201-4670 or visit www.burlingtonghostwalks.ca to find out more.
