they moved to Vancouver where they built the church that later became the Crosby Memorial Church. George traveled to the west coast on his summer holidays and became fascinated with the work that missionary Dr. Thomas C. Crosby did and eventually on graduating accepted a post at the Bella Bella Mission Hospital. George Elias Darby's mother (Elizabeth Bousefield) was very religious. George inherited his father's sense of humour and knowledge of fixing mechanical things. Geo had a naphtha run boat on the Erie Canal and sailing it gave George a love of the water.
