

Rockwood Farmers Parade of Lights

The annual Rockwood Farmers Parade of Lights attracted a large crowd on December 11. Kevin Murison of Rockwood said it was the best turnout he's ever seen for the parade. This year the parade featured a variety of floats including a corn planter owned by Rockwood resident Murray Swanston. The corn planter, festooned with Christmas lights, came with a big Merry Christmas sign on the back. Then there was John Murison's float called the Night Before Christmas, Jamie Weick's float called the Farmer's Wish List, and a float featuring The Country Cloggers dancers. One of the new floats this year was one from Anthony Acres in Limehouse called the Anthony Acres Express.

This was the most poetic float along Rockwood's parade route. The Night Before Christmas float was the handiwork of John Murison of Rockwood and friends.

Walter Swanston of Rockwood contributed this float with the big round sign.
