Budget Passes-Parliament says "YES" to a stronger Canada

It was an exciting week in Ottawa. Despite attempts by the Conservative / Bloc separatists alliance to defeat the budget and force Canadians into an early election, Parliament passed the popular Liberal budget, allowing this government to continue implementing the programs on which they were elected to deliver a year ago.

It was a close vote, but those who believed in this budget stood together and voted yes to a stronger Canada. Those that believe in a strong Canada voted:

- Yes to a balanced budget and a stronger economy
- Yes to improving health care funding
- Yes to affordable child care and an early learning program
- Yes to protecting the environment

The Conservative / Bloc-separatist alliance vote against the budget represented a vote against all of these important and popular initiatives.

"The Prime Minister and I are committed to continuing to work with the Provinces and Territories to fulfill the commitments we made a year ago," maintained M.P. Carr.

Belinda Stronach, like a lot of former Progressive Conservatives left Stephen Harper's right wing party to join the Liberal Caucus. Her former Conservative / Reform colleagues unleashed a torrent of demeaning, personal and sexist comments. Criticism is acceptable; however, sexism and personal attacks are not.

The budget vote saw the value of co-operation over conflict. This government has demonstrated that they are committed to continuing to work with their fellow Parliamentarians and to make this minority government work.
