

Produce stand moved to safer location

By MANDI HARGRAVE

Last week a local Georgetown produce stand that had been in the same location for about six years moved to a new, safer location at Country Depot's property on Highway 7.

Truck drivers had been complaining about the previous location of the produce stand, as it was located right on the shoulder of Highway 7. Cars pulling off the highway and onto the shoulder were creating a traffic hazard.

Amanda Moore who works at the produce stand said that she and other workers were at risk from passing cars because the stand was so close to the road.

Moore was told to move the stand last Thursday by the Town and in anticipation of that her mother Shelley Moore talked to Rob Paris, proprietor of the Country Depot to see if they could set up shop on his forecourt.

Paris said it was no problem and offered them the space for free to help the girls out because it is their summer job.

"It's not interfering with my operation," he said. Moore and fellow co-worker Rhiannon Cooksey are enjoying the new location, as they feel safer being off the highway. The only problem with the move is that business has been down, as people don't know where the stand location has been moved.

Paris said the situation is unfortunate, "They're only trying to make a few bucks for themselves." He said local people know that they get good, quality produce from the stand. Now they'll just have to go another kilometre from the old location to find it. The produce stand owner, Dave Loduca buys the produce from Allison Farms. The stand is open from 10 am to 6 pm Monday to Friday, 10 am to 4 pm Saturday and 11 am to 5 pm on Sunday
