

Watch for phone scam

Seniors, in fact everyone, are being warned about a telephone scam which can result in long distance calls being billed to your phone number.

An individual who identifies himself as an AT&T service technician phones to say he is conducting a test on the telephone line. He states that to complete the test you should touch nine (9), zero (0), then the pound (#) sign and then hang up.

Don't do it! This gives the person full access to your telephone line.

Bell Canada has verified the information.

Tea Lady entertains

Ladies' Aid celebrates 110

By JEAN SOMERVILLE

The Tea Lady of southern Ontario, Melody Wren of Guelph, was the guest speaker at Knox Presbyterian Church recently.

Attired in a Victorian-style outfit, she discussed the art of hosting afternoon tea, the history of tea and customs related to its use. Her book, Tea Rooms of Southern Ontario, has been popular and gives description of over 80 tea rooms including the menus, ambience and points of local interest.

The Ladies' Aid of Knox were celebrating their 110th anniversary and hosted the old-fashioned tea. Several ladies presented a history of some of the events and their activities since the organization began in 1888. A wealth of information was provided by the secretaries' and treasurers' books kept since 1919.

Stories of well attended garden parties held on the lawns of members' homes, local farms and in the Acton Park were recalled. The popularity of fowl suppers and the challenge of feeding over 500 guests in the church basement was also detailed.

Following the program, a dainty lunch was served. A display of the anniversary autographed quilt, the Ladies' Aid banner, photos and other memorabilia was enjoyed by the large crowd.

Acton illustrator featured at festival

Acton illustrator Karen Reczuch is one of 12 nationally renowned children's authors, illustrators and storytellers who will bring their tales to life at the third annual I Love to Read! Milton's Literacy Festival for children on Sunday at The Farm Museum - formerly the Ontario Agricultural Museum.

Reczuch, who used the faces of her husband and two children in each of her four books, dreamed of becoming a ballet dancer when she was a child. She tried to persuade her parents to enrol her in dance class by drawing ballerinas. Instead of dancing lessons Karen's wise parents signed her up for art lessons. Her pictures capture a sense of place and express the feelings of the characters in the stories she illustrates.

Rockwood author Kathy Stinson's inspiration for her first two books "Red is Best" and "Big or Little" came from the idiosyncrasies of her children when they were young. Both books became award-winners and "Red is Best" has been translated into seven languages.

Eden Mills illustrator Janet Wilson's books are distributed internationally and several have won awards, earning Wilson a reputation for creatively interpreting the text of authors.

The festival runs from noon until 4 p.m.
