

Are you looking for things to do with the kids this summer? Let me try to help you out. There are lots of options in and around Acton to keep kids of all ages entertained while they are out of school. There are many parks, trails, pools, and places to play nearby. Some you may already know about, others may be new to you, so be sure and check them out.

this summer, as well as play, one educational and fun place to go is the Electric Railway Museum on Guelph Line just a few minutes out of Acton. This volunteer-run attraction features the preserved Rockwood station, railroad artifacts, and best of all (according to my 9 year-old brother) a real working railway!

The tracks take you from the station for a short ride and then circle around a beautiful rock garden, stopping to let you off on Meadowville platform where you can have a picnic, eat ice cream, wander in the garden, check out some train cars and then catch the next train back. You may even end up riding more than one train as they have about a dozen that are able to run on any day.

When we were there, we got to ride three different trains, and all were beautifully restored with as much attention to detail as possible. The conductor was more than willing to discuss the trains and their histories.

There are picnic tables and food is available where you purchase tickets. Guests are free to explore all open buildings and have unlimited train rides for the day. The museum's summer hours are from 10 to 5 daily from now until September, and special events occur all year round.

Tickets for adults are $6.50, youth $4.50, seniors $5.50 and children 2 or under are free. Groups of four or more receive reduced prices. Take Highway 7 west to the Eden Mills cutoff, proceed along the Town Line to the Guelph Line, then south and follow the signs.
