Rear view mirror off?

We received a phone call this week from a distraught friend. The rear view mirror in her car had fallen off of the windshield and was hanging from the headliner by a small electrical wire. Being fairly handy, Sue taped the mirror to the sun visor to get it out of the way. "What do I do now?" was her question.

There are many reasons why the rearview mirror may detach from the windshield. Some of these are:

- high humidity conditions which may cause the production adhesive to fail
- improper cleaning of the glass and mirror button during repair process
- use of expired or improperly stored service kits

A couple of quick calls from Tech Talk to auto glass centres found a few great deals. Prices for reattaching the mirror ranged from $5 to $50; that was until we spoke to Derek Hazelwood, the owner of Apple Auto Glass in Georgetown. Derek told us that as a courtesy to motorists, there is no charge for this service at his shop.

If you find your rearview mirror in your lap, we suggest Apple Auto Glass in Georgetown for an unbeatable price.
