

IODE readies for big bazaar

BY DOT NORTON

Our meeting was held at the home of Ernestine Foster on Tuesday night opening with the Prayer of the Order and Flag Salute lead by Regent Helen Jocque.

Our Education lady told us that the high moved by Rosealea and seconded by Ernestine.

Our service lady tells us that they have hopes of getting the old fire hall to pack the Christmas hampers this year. The next business meeting for Christmas hampers will be held Dec. 16. We will also send our donation to them.

Interesting reading once again from our calendar of this year on the Saskatchewan Coat of Arms. Strange that their flower should be red lily, of which we have so many here, in Ontario.

Now our big important item which is our main money maker of the year — the bazaar on Nov. 14. Please mark it on your calendar folks. Our gal Ernestine Foster seems to have things well organized for so few of us. Let us hope we can give her all the support she needs.

This is the time we remember our fallen comrades and wear a poppy in remembrance. Helen read the proper way to wear a poppy is on the left side of your lapel over the heart and, in no other place. We all wear it in respect and to remember.

Helen and her sister attended a musical celebration in Norfolk United Church, Guelph, in remembrance of Guelph native, Dr. John McCrae. Helen said the church was packed and a singsong of old war songs brought tears and laughter to one and all.

A motion made for a cheque to be sent to Halton's Women's Place was passed. We will also take gifts to our Christmas dinner to send them

A letter of thanks was received from the Literary Guild of Georgetown for our donation. We hope to celebrate our Christmas party at Sweet Dreams Cafe.

LEST WE FORGET: Under cold blustery skies Acton residents and members of Royal Canadian Legion Branch 197 reflected on the sacrifices this Town's soldiers made for freedom and democracy at yesterday's Remembrance Day ceremony at the Cenotaph. Legion president Gary Munday (right) read the Legion Charge and the Reverend Mark Tiller of St. Alban's Church led the prayers. — Frances Niblock photo

Acton remembers war dead

go on forever.

Under a grey, overcast sky on Sunday morning at the Mill Street cenotaph, Acton's Frank Spielvogel read the list — his voice wavering and breaking at times as he carefully pronounced each of the 43 names of the men and boys whose names will live forever.

Led by the Acton Citizens' Band, old and young, boys and girls, Scouts, Guides, police officers, church officials, elected officials and Legion members marched proudly and reverently to the Cenotaph war memorial, guarded by members of "C" Company Lorne Scots. Hundreds of residents, including the congregations of both Trinity United and Acton Baptist churches, stood quietly as the representatives of groups and organizations laid their wreaths.

Acton Citizens' Band master George Elliott played Last Post and Reveille as the crowd reflected on the meaning of duty, courage and country and of the sacrifice's this Town's soldiers made to ensure that Canadians enjoy peace, freedom and democracy.

After Trinity United Reverend Bob Matton read the benediction, the Colour Guard led the way into Trinity for a Service of Remembrance.

At 11 yesterday (Wednesday) morning The Royal Canadian Legion Branch 197 held a brief ceremony at the Cenotaph and stood for a minute's silence for the 115,000 Canadians soldiers who fought and died.

Less contamination

Rovers said they scraped a "skiff" of soil — eight to 10 centimetres — on 60-acres of spray fields to remove soil with higher than allowable levels of chromium sulphate. That soil and other non-hazardous waste materials will be consolidated in an 11-acre landfill in the centre of the property.

Rovers said Maple Leaf Foods would like to move a PCB storage facility from the property, but it's a long-range plan.

The Beardmore Company opened the tannery in 1844 and operated it until 1944 when Canada Packers purchased it. The tannery closed in 1986 and until 1993, when ownership changed to Maple Leaf Foods, various tenants rented space in the facility.

The remainder of the buildings and structures on site will be demolished this spring as the waste consolidation continues. Rovers said final grading and capping is slated for 2001 and monitoring of the site will continue for the foreseeable future.

"The property will then be looking forward to the future, whatever that is, and there are no plans for that at the present time."

The decommissioning of the former Beardmore site will be discussed at tonight's (Thursday) annual general meeting of P.O.W.E.R. — the north-Halton environmental group. A Ministry of Energy and Environment official will be on hand at Acton High school to answer questions and concerns.
