MSB students solve problems

Superior problem solving skills, analytical expertise and acting skills earned a team of Grade 5 students from McKenzie-Smith Bennett (MSB) school the gold medal for their grade level at the North Halton Junior Think Bowl championships.

The four-student team was also second over-all among the 17 junior teams from Acton, Georgetown and Milton entered in the annual academic competition, held in Milton on Friday. Teams from Stewarttown won both the gold and bronze medals.

MSB Think Bowl coach and special education instructor Libby Keller said it's the first time a Grade 5 team finished in the top three, but the team of Marissa Kidd,

The phones rang off the hook, the FAX churned out demands for immediate shipments and major media lined up for interviews at Acton's Purity Life Health Products Limited on Tuesday morning.

The buzz was over a red capsule of herbal remedies called Cellasene that is touted as the cure for cellulite, the lumpy, dimpled fat deposits that all the dieting and exercise in the world won't remove from the butts, thighs and arms of mainly women and some men.

Purity Life is the Canadian distributor of the Italian cellulite formula that contains plant extracts, fish oil and iodine. A two-to-three week supply of 40 capsules will retail for $69.95 and on Tuesday, everyone wanted it. Calls to Purity Life included individual requests for Cellasene, calls from people who wanted to invest in the company and calls from people wanting to become sub-brokers, dealers or sales persons.

The answer was the same to all - Cellasene will be shipped this week and should be on pharmacy and health food store shelves next week.

While Purity owner David Chapman attended the glitzy North American launch of Cellasene in New York, brother Michael, the manager of product development for Cellasene, reveled in the buzz.

"Here's a nutritional supplement that provides the body with everything it needs to take care of cellulite. This isn't a wonder drug, or a fat-melting pill. This isn't medicine. This is true nutrition that helps with micro-circulation and cellulite is really caused by a lack of circulation," Chapman said.

Several Purity Life staffers showed off their baggy jeans as visual testimonials to Cellasene, including Purity's national sales manager Dianah Wells, the first person in Canada to try Cellasene.

"Over 90 per cent of the women who try it gets results. I've been on it seven weeks now and I've had considerable reduction in the cellulite on my thighs and butt. It has not eliminated the cellulite on my upper arms yet, but I plan to continue taking it" Wells said adding she'd lost a half-an-inch from each thigh.

Purity Life expects to distribute several hundred thousand packages of Cellasene in Canada in the coming months.
