SOLUTION

New website devoted to business

The Town of Halton Hills is pleased to announce the launch of our Economic Development Web Site www.haltonhillsbusiness.com.

The new web site provides information on available business opportunities in the Town of Halton Hills.

Emphasis has been placed on the 401-407 Gateway Business Park, a 1000 acre prestige Industrial Park in south Halton Hills at the intersection of Highways 401 and 407.

The web site provides: a Town of Halton Hills on-line business directory information on the 401-407 Gateway business park information on Acton and Georgetown industrial areas an overview of the facilities and attributes found in Halton Hills. For more information contact: Allan JO'Neill, Economic Development Officer, Town of Halton Hills, 905-873-2601 x2343 or 905-873-2267 or email allano@town.halton-hills.on.ca.

TOWN DIGEST

Skateboard plans roll out

Plans for an Acton skateboard park become more than just a wish next month when a steering committee, set up with Town help to make the facility a reality, meets for the first time.

Town staff will "facilitate" the March 12 start-up session with boarders, parents, school staff, and others who volunteered at a skateboard park open house this spring at Acton High School.

After deciding how the committee will work, members will discuss core objectives and a program to design, market and fund raise for an Acton facility.

The Town's 2004 capital budget forecast, approved in principal by Council, includes $120,000 for an Acton skateboard park.

One in 10 people struggle with alcohol problems

Alberta Premier Ralph Klein last week admitted that he had a drinking problem after he was publicly embarrassed at a men's shelter.

Many turn to alcohol as a way of coping with life's problems, because it can mask the pain, take away the fear - for a while. Eventually the solution becomes the problem - a problem that often destroys relationships and decimates families.

It takes courage to take the first step toward getting help. But it doesn't have to be done alone.

Today, the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health launched the second phase of a multi-year public education campaign, which will reach out to the one in 10 people who struggle with problems of alcohol misuse.

The first wave, launched in October 2000 focused on depression. It was successful in reaching out to the millions of Canadians who struggle with this condition yet who resist seeking help largely due to the stigma related to the condition and its treatments.

Dr. Graeme Cunningham, of Guelph, became a champion for people with addictions after a long personal struggle with alcohol. "Following my own recovery, I realized early on that I drew strength through helping others with addictions," says Cunningham, Director of Addiction Medicine for Homewood Health Centre in Guelph.

Through public service ads, a website, www.thereishelp.org, community education forums and programs targeted at specific audiences including workplaces and schools, the Centre will be bringing information and resources closer to the people who need them.

"Our surveys demonstrate that Ontarians are hearing these messages - almost 47% of those surveyed indicated that, after reading the first set of ads on depression, they would seek help," says Dr. Paul Garfinkel, President and CEO of CAMH.

"Alcohol misuse is greatly misunderstood and those misconceptions often contribute to reluctance to seek help," states Dr. Garfinkel. "Our goal is to help to increase understanding of problems related to alcohol misuse - everything from the shared responsibility we all have to ensure responsible alcohol use among our own friends, family, and colleagues to improved understanding of the factors that contribute to an individual's readiness to seek help."

All services for this project, including creative concepts, production, ad space, web design and public relations have been donated by corporations and media outlets equally committed to this important issue.

The Centre will provide increased and convenient public access to support and educational resources through:

- A highly visible storefront information Centre in Toronto
An expanded and enhanced toll-free information line.
A comprehensive web strategy designed to disseminate addiction and mental health information broadly.
A telephone support line staffed by volunteers to provide informal and/or peer support to people with mental health and addictions problems.
The opportunity to reach out to diverse communities with well-developed resource materials and an effective dissemination strategy.

The Centre for Addiction and Mental Health is Canada's largest centre in the area of mental health and addictions. A World Health Organization Centre of Excellence and a teaching hospital fully affiliated with the University of Toronto, the Centre was established in 1998 through the merger of the Addiction Research Foundation, the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry, the Donwood Institute and the Queen Street Mental Health Centre.
