AHS hosts 'very successful' Arts Night

Acton District High School hosted a very successful Arts Night on Friday May 31 at 7pm. Two short student written plays were premiered and the Grade 12 Visual Arts class presented a high-energy fashion show of wearable art made from found materials. During the intermission visitors wandered through an art show of student work, bidding on items in a silent auction and listening to guitarists Zoe Glass and Bobby Pereira. The first play of the evening was 'Falling From Heaven'. This involving play was written by Acton student Raechelle Handley and was co-directed by Brad Ridler and Raechelle Handley. It featured the talents of Beth Clayton, Steph Hynds, Jeff McEnery, Frank Willis and Aislinn Moore. 'Falling From Heaven' tells the story of Heaven's (Beth Clayton) struggles dealing with the personal relationships in her life. The second play was 'Iago's Cure', an intriguing plot written by Acton student Emma Webster and co-directed by Tammy Dickinson and Emma Webster. 'Iago's Cure' featured the talents of Liz Lewis, Jeremy Mersereau, Frank Willis, Geoff Webster, Kayleigh LeBlanc and Cat Wilkinson. 'Iago's Cure' tells the story of how corrupt scientist Iris Goddard (Liz Lewis) steals the cure for cancer from scientists Joseph Turner (Jeremy Mersereau) and Chris Hannah (Frank Willis) and causes their untimely deaths.
