First hand experience for trooper

An inspirational and provocative presentation by someone who has experienced the impact of impaired driving first hand will take place at John Elliott Theatre in Georgetown Tuesday, April 11.

Michael Buckingham was a state trooper with the Washington Highway Patrol when he attempted to pull over an impaired driver one spring night.

The chase that ensued ended in a three-car collision that left him unconscious. Forty-seven per cent of his body was burned and he spent seven months in hospital and had numerous operations.

Now, Buckingham speaks against impaired driving to groups all across North America. He delivers his message of zero tolerance with honesty and humor, using descriptive examples of how impaired driving has affected other young people.

He addresses how it affects drivers, passengers and pedestrians and the attitude around impaired driving.

Most people feel immune to harm, especially young people. Buckingham emphasizes that not all injuries are physical. Emotional trauma, the flashbacks and nightmares, are destructive and can last a lifetime.

Buckingham will be at Acton High School at 9 a.m. Monday, then at Georgetown High at 1 p.m. He will speak to students at Bishop Reding Tuesday afternoon and will be speaking in Georgetown Tuesday night at 7 p.m.

The presentation at John Elliot Theatre is sponsored by the community consultation committees in the area, as well as Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) and the Injury Prevention Committee.

Intruder gets away

A Gould Cres. Acton man heard his garage door open at 2:30 a.m. Monday and then looked out the window to see the door of his car was open. He called police, but the intruder had left before they arrived. Nothing appeared to have been taken, police said.
