Cheap fuel gravy train is over

Dear editor:
I cannot let your editorial entitled "Gassed Out" in which you complained about the recent increases in the cost of gas, pass without comment.

We Canadians are the highest per capita consumers of energy in the world. While one reason is the cold climate, the other has to be the low cost of fuel for our cars. Compare the price we pay to that in European countries. For example, whilst in England last month, I paid the same price per litre in pence as I currently pay in cents in Canada — and the rate of exchange is $2.25-£1!

On top of that, how many residents in the Georgetown area drive regularly into Toronto i.e. on a daily basis, rather than use the GO train? Far too many. How many car pool with their fellow workers? Far too few.

In short, I believe your editorial should have focused on the fact that the cheap fuel "gravy train" is over, not complain about the recent hikes that market forces have brought about (and I do not work for an oil company, by the way).
