Friends of the Library prepare for centennial year

Have you always been a great enthusiast of the Halton Public Libraries and wondered how to show your interest?

Or perhaps you are new to the area and would like to become more involved in the community?

The Friends of Halton Hills Libraries is a non-profit organization dedicated to supporting the library. They are presently looking for new members and invite you to join them in their activities.

Some of the Friends contributions to the library through past fundraising efforts include investing in archive shelving (matching a grant from the government through the Esquesing Historical Society), providing additional funds to book collections, furnishing a picture rail to display library-owned art, and purchasing display cases for Eskimo soap carvings.

Your membership donation of $10 paid annually goes into an independent fund administered by the Friends to help the library to finance its capital and special program and project needs.

The Friends of Halton Hills Libraries meet once a month and hold an Annual General Meeting. They are currently very active in the celebration of the library's centennial and will be sponsoring a variety of special events and fundraising projects.

To become a member simply drop by either branch library to fill out an application form. For more information, contact Cindy Cooper at the Halton Hills Public Libraries, 873-2681.
