Fitzsimmons to speak on: Training children to be peacemakers

By LUCINDA LANDAU
Special to The Independent/Free Press

International Consultant Charles Fitzsimmons has been invited to Georgetown to present a seminar, Training Children to be Peacemakers.

The talk is the second in a series on raising children sponsored by the Baha'i community of Halton Hills. The meeting will be held in the Gallery of the Georgetown Public Library on Tuesday, Nov. 7 at 8 p.m.

Fitzsimmons has cultivated a lifelong interest in mediation and conflict resolution through his work as a consultant in the technology and transportation. He works in Europe, the U.S., Canada and spent 10 years in the Caribbean. He is the father of two children and has specific views on how to shape our children to become the citizens of tomorrow.

"Many children are growing up with a sense of despair and depression about their future," said Fitzsimmons. "We can give them a realistic perspective of optimism to see the peaks instead of the valleys."

"Many of our time-honored institutions are disappearing forever, and this gives not only us, but our children little confidence in a future world of prosperity," he continued. "However, there are some basic guiding principles we can give our children which can help them to make sense of the chaos we are entrenched in as a society today."

Soheil Mosun, resident of Halton Hills, member of the Baha'i Faith and owner of an international fabrication plant says, "I can see it in my work on a daily basis, there is something exciting evolving between people as countries become more technologically advanced. It is the peacemakers of tomorrow who will be in a position to secure our survival as a race of people on earth."

Mosun indicated that the Baha'i community in Halton Hills wants to address the positive aspects of our changing world especially as it impacts upon our children, who deserve to be raised in an atmosphere of hope and promise for tomorrow.

Information meeting

What is the #1 cause of death for women in Canada? Ninety-one percent of women surveyed by the Heart and Stroke Foundation in 1994 did not realize that it is heart disease and stroke.

The Milton chapter of the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario is hosting an information evening on Women, Heart Disease and Stroke on November 7, 7 p.m. at Hugh Foster Hall, 53 Brown St., Milton.

Astra Canada Pharmaceutical Company is sponsoring the evening and local businesses are supporting a silent auction during the evening with all proceeds going to the Milton chapter of the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario.

The evening is free but space is limited so call 634-7732 to register.
