away on vacation during the summer months and are not available to see notifications or attend public meetings.

It was also noted that members of Halton Hills Council didn't receive prior notice of the meeting because a consultant from the region neglected to provide notice to Halton Hills municipal staff for circulation to council members.

Costea told council at its July 13 meeting that regional staff balked at holding another public meeting because they had already held one and it had been "duly advertised". However, staff agreed to come to council on Monday to make a public presentation on expansion plans for the plant.

Among regional staff expected to appear at the presentation will be Vince Suffoletta, Halton's manager of water plant operations. Councillor Marilyn Serjeantson, said in an interview three weeks ago that the water plants needs upgrading "to bring it up to provincial standards." Plans include the addition of a covered garage, showers and other amenities to the facility. Mayor Miller attempted to allay Rutherford's concerns about sufficient public input into the project by telling her at council's meeting two weeks ago that council will "represent the people" by asking questions during the regional presentation Monday.

Jason Hume, 5, of Kingham Court, Acton dropped by for a visit with Halton Hills Ambulance officer Graham Blair Wednesday night. When the youngster fractured his right femur in June and Blair and his partner transported him to Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto the night of his accident. He visited to update the ambulance officer on his progress and have his cast signed. Photo by Scott Kline

Police beat

Phones lifted

A 49-year-old Georgetown man has been charged with theft after someone was "observed" leaving a Guelph St., Georgetown store without paying for a pair of cordless phones.

According to Halton Regional Police at 11 Division (Georgetown), a man was seen walking around the store with the Emmerson cordless phones, at about 9 p.m. Wednesday. A short time later, he left the store "without offering payment" for the phones.

A store employee stopped the man outside and police were called. The man is set to appear in a Milton court August 31. The telephones were worth approximately $185.

Really foul ball

About $400 damage was done after a baseball struck a car windshield during a game last week. The 1988 Chevrolet Cavalier was parked at the Limehouse Public School diamond when a foul ball struck and cracked the windshield.

Assault charge

A 24-year-old Georgetown man has been charged with assault after an argument "escalated" and a 19-year-old woman was struck.

According to Halton Regional Police, the spouses became involved in an argument at about 8 p.m. Wednesday and the victim suffered "minor bruising" to her hand and the back of her head.

Newspaper boxes found

Four Toronto Sun newspaper boxes were found on a hiking trail near the Sixth Line and 20 Sideroad, Sunday. Police say the coin collection compartment on each of the boxes had been opened with a torch and the change removed. Police are unsure where the boxes came from and how much money has been taken.

Cutting torch taken

A cutting torch, its regulator and about 100 feet of hose were removed from a pickup truck parked on Main Street, Acton sometime last weekend.

Along with the torch, the truck's battery and battery cables were removed. The equipment was worth about $875.

Fabric Care TIPS

Misleading Care Labels

According to the Federal Trade Commission's Care Label Rule, most wearing apparel made today must have a care label permanently affixed to the article. Unfortunately, many care labels give inaccurate or unclear instructions and continue to confuse both the consumer and the professional drycleaner and launderer.

You may not look at the care label until it is time to have your clothing cleaned, and then you are shocked at the true meaning of the care label. One of the more confusing labels reads: "Do not dryclean, do not wash, spot clean only."

The Care Label Rule clearly states that the instructions on the label must be followed, and anyone who processes the garment contrary to the label is responsible for garment failure.

Because of this fact, many drycleaners have had to tell their customers there is not a process that will spot clean the garment successfully. Any spot cleaning procedure will be ineffective in removing underarm stains, cosmetics around the collar, and other general soil. Consequently, your drycleaner may be forced into the unfortunate predicament of telling you that they cannot clean the item.
