Summer safety tips from Halton Hills Fire Department

Fire outdoors can be dangerous. Barbecuing, camping and boating trigger thoughts of recreational fun that good weather and leisure time bring. But any one of these good times can become a fiery catastrophe.

Take outdoor cooking. Flammable liquids should not be used to light charcoal or wood fires. Flammable liquids, even charcoal lighter fluid can cause explosions, serious burns and even death when improperly used near heat or flame.

Boy Scouts don't use flammable liquids to start camp fires. Be a good Scout, don't use flammable liquids.

For outdoor safety, flammable liquids rank well behind other charcoal starters. Safest of all is charcoal lighter in cake form and labeled by a nationally recognized testing laboratory such as Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada.

Using Gasoline to start a fire is asking for explosive trouble. Trying to get more pep into a charcoal fire by dumping any flammable liquid onto hot coals is asking the fire to reach right out and burn you. If a slow fire heeds help, tuck dry kindling underneath it.

Camping in the backyard has always been great fun for youngsters. Make sure the tent is flame retardant. Parafin-coated tents are great for keeping rain out — but they can burn up in minute with a child trapped inside.

Under no circumstances should any flame be used inside a tent. Flashlights are the answer. Supervision of backyard camping is a must for parents. Too many children have been seriously burns experimenting with campfires, candles and flammable liquids.

Boating demands fire safe activities too, and they are simple. When refueling, don't smoke or have any ignition source near the area. Leave a touch of room in the tank for fuel expansion and wipe all spills.

The same goes for refueling power mowers and saws. After you refuel, move the mower or saw away from the refueling spot before you start the motor.

Halton Hydrant says...

"You will enjoy good boating, camping and living in the outdoors if you just 'learn not to burn'."

At the outset of the presentation to council, the region's manager of water plant operations Vince Suffoletta said there won't be any increase in the capacity of the plant as a result of the proposed improvements and expansion.

"The changes will improve existing technical and work areas in the facility," Suffoletta said.

Rutherford said that she sees the proposed expansion as "a visual barrier" that will further hamper people's view of Cedarvale Park.

"People, here, are very protective of the park," she said. "I have a number of concerns on this and so do many residents."
