• The Arts Alive Award for Visual Arts — Jacky Willows

Willows has worked with community theatre for the past 13 years on over 40 shows. Her accomplishments include directing, set design, painting sets, acting, costume design and producing plays. She received an

Jacky Willows

Association of Community Theatre Thea for best set design for The Music Man (Globe Productions) and nominations for set design for 42nd Street (Globe) and Night Must Fall (Georgetown Little Theatre). In addition, Willows has painted backdrops for Stewarttown Middle School and Georgetown Children's Chorus. She is currently busy directing Camelot for Globe, and designing the set and painting it too. Her set designs and backdrops have given pleasure to thousands of people over the past 13 years.

• The Arts Alive Award for the Performing Arts — Ron Hill

'Almost' a founding member of Georgetown Little Theatre, (he joined in 1961, one year after the group was formed.) Hill has been involved in theatre since the age of 18, when he joined the Royal Air Force and performed in musical revues and concert parties for the troops. Since coming to Canada in 1952, Hill has continued to work in theatre, both as an amateur and professional. He has performed in 36 GLT plays, directed 19, and served 11 terms on their executive. Hill has received numerous nominations and awards for best actor and best supporting actor, and he also received a best scrip award for The Bungalosa, an original musical performed in 1976 by GLT. Totally committed to his art, Hill has also been published in Reader's Digest.

• The Arts Alive Award for Patron of the Arts — Paul and Janet Armstrong

Paul and Janet Armstrong have supported the arts community in Georgetown for over over 20 years. Their financial support and attendance at concerts, plays and shows has been deeply appreciated by many on the arts groups in town. These include: Georgetown Choral Society, GLT, Globe, Georgetown Children's Chorus, Halton Hills Children's Chorus and the Canadian Cancer Society's Vaudeville Show. In addition, they have been part of fundraising groups, including fundraising for John Elliott Theatre. Halton Hills is fortunate to have Paul and Janet Armstrong in our town.
