Fund provides rewards

Working Ventures Canadian Fund, Canada's leading labor-sponsored investment fund has launched Investment Rewards.

It's a marketing program linking investee companies like the olde Hide House of Acton with Working Ventures' 147,000 shareholders.

The coupon-based "reward" program, will give shareholders special discounts on products and services offered by the investee companies.

The olde Hide House is Canada's largest leather goods outlet.

Williamson keeps 'Door' open

Steve Williamson, owner of Williamson Industries, presents Sonya Traynor and Ann Scheepers-Nevins, executive director of the Open Door Youth Centre, with a cheque for $6,500. Williamson says Open Door is a worthwhile program deserving of community support.

TAX TALK

A PUBLIC SERVICE OF H&R BLOCK

Q. I am employed as a commission salesman and would like to deduct office in home expenses as employment expenses on my tax return. I heard that the rules for claiming these expenses are quite strict and am wondering if I will be able to claim them?

A. It depends on how your home office is used. In order for you to claim the expenses, the home office must be either your principal place of employment, or be used exclusively for the purpose of earning income and be used on a regular and continuous basis for meeting customers for business reasons. In addition, you must have a completed Form T2200, certified by your employer, to make the claim.
