GLT's latest comedy premieres tomorrow

It's curtain up on Georgetown Little Theatre's production of I Hate Hamlet, by Paul Rudnick, and directed by Steve Prevost. As you might suspect from the title, this play is a comedy with a Shakespearean twist.

Successful young television star, Andrew Rally (played by Robert Jepson), has just had his series cancelled. He has been invited to come to New York to do Shakespeare-In-The-Park playing the role of Hamlet.

There's just one problem—Andrew hates Hamlet! Help is close at hand as Andrew has just moved into the apartment previously owned by a former great Hamlet, John Barrymore. With the help of a psychic real estate agent (Carol Beauchamp) Barrymore's ghost (Brian Banyard) is summoned to help Andrew prepare for his role and hilarious hijinks ensue. Add to this situation Andrew's slightly flaky girlfriend (Julia Tiller), his chain-smoking agent (Pat Green), his ambitious L.A. friend (Paul d'Entremont), and some swashbuckling to boot and you have an entertaining play.

I Hate Hamlet opens with a benefit performance supporting the North Halton Distress and Information Centre on Thursday, April 17 and runs April 18, 19, 23-26 at the John Elliott Theatre. Tickets are available at the box office or by calling 877-3700.
