As spring approaches and Mother's Day nears that can only mean one thing—the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada's annual Carnation Campaign.

The MS Society Carnation Campaign, implemented across Canada, is a fund-raising event held annually each May.

On May 8, 9, and 10, volunteers all across the province will be offering carnations to the public in return for donations that support vital MS research and client services.

"I encourage everyone to take notice and support the Multiple Sclerosis Society by purchasing a carnation for that special person in their life. It could be the most important flower they will ever receive since donations help fund vital research and services for people living with MS," said Wendy Gibbs, vice-president of fund-raising for the MS Society.

MS research has begun to yield results that are now being used to treat people who have MS. In 1995, the Canadian government approved one type of beta interferon for relapsing-remitting MS that has been shown to reduce the frequency and severity of MS attacks.

Multiple Sclerosis attacks the central nervous system of people in the prime of their life causing varied symptoms including numbness, loss of balance, extreme fatigue, and possible paralysis.

Its cause is unknown, its cure undiscovered and its course unpredictable. Tens of thousands of Canadians have the disease, which as yet has no known cause or cure.

The MS Society of Canada expects to raise $2 million nationwide from the Carnation Campaign this year. Since its inception in 1976, the event has raised $27 million for the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada.

Do you work long days?

Is it difficult for you to set required appointment times with health care professionals? You are not alone. More and more people are working longer hours these days. We have an answer to this common dilemma. Our office is now available for night time appointments. Office visits are now being scheduled up until 8 p.m. on Monday nights. New patients are scheduled after 8 p.m. by appointment only. This will prevent any unwanted frustration for yourself from unexpected traffic delays, etc. So relax - we're open late! If Monday is already a busy night for your family, Saturdays are an option. Our Saturday morning appointment times are popular. Our office location is in the Mountainview plaza on the ground level. We'll see you there!
