Council okays '98 budget

million in taxes will pick up the balance.

The 1998 town budget maintains the current level of service with the addition of only two new staff positions. A general cost of living adjustment was given to all town staff and council members.

It's estimated—by region officials—that when regional and education taxes are figured in that Halton Hills taxpayers could see as much as a $159 increase on their 1998 bills (with reassessment included).

However, the overall tax impact will not be known with any certainty until June when the final 1998 assessment figures have been calculated and Halton regional council has set its final tax policies.

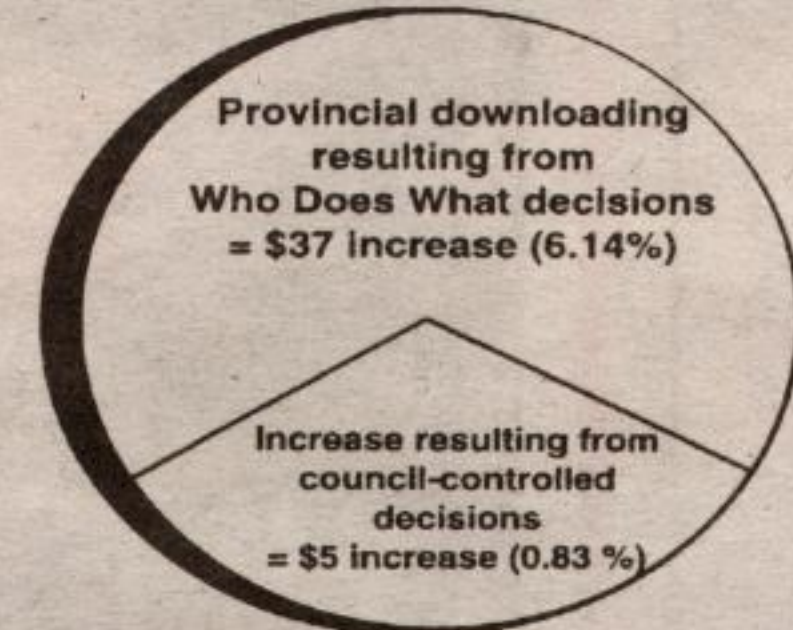

Since the provincial downloading was first announced in 1997, its dollar impact on this municipality has changed 11 times.

Acton Councillor Norm Elliott said he was frustrated that the education tax portion was not removed completely from the property tax bill as the province has promised. While the education tax share in Halton was only a 44 per cent reduction, he noted that monies, normally paid as education tax, seem to have simply shifted to regional and town tax burdens.

He noted the portion of the budget controlled by council decisions had risen only less than 1.5 per cent in the last seven years.

"I don't think we have anything to be ashamed of. We should certainly defend that," said Elliott.
