New sub shop offers sandwich specialties

By EMILY THOMPSON

Jack Spratt could eat no fat... From the lines of the famous nursery rhyme comes the name of one of the newest restaurants in Georgetown, Jack Spratt Subs.

The restaurant carries a wide variety of pitas and submarines, with more than 20 sandwiches to choose from, served on white, sourdough or whole wheat bread. Located beside Burger King at 235 Guelph Street, the shop seats approximately 24 people.

Owner and manager Andrew Temple, from Bolton, is a 10-year veteran in the food business, having graduated from Ryerson University with a degree in hospitality management. Jack Spratt Subs is his first franchise, and he currently employs six full and part-time employees.

Temple says Jack Spratt's has the best product, and "when you have the best product it's easy to market." The all-Canadian franchise was founded in 1995 by Steve Hunking and is based in London; currently there are 20 locations across Ontario.

Jack Spratt's is one of several restaurants in Georgetown that sells submarines, so how do they expect to remain competitive? "A fresh attitude!" says Temple. Submarines are a healthy alternative to more traditional fast food, he says. Jack Spratt's uses quality fixings and vegetables, which come from a local supplier. The bread is made from scratch, rather than frozen dough. The sourdough bread is Jack Spratt's signature, comprising nearly half of all their orders. By delivering the freshest product available at a competitive price, Jack Spratt Subs hopes to remain a popular Georgetown eatery, Temple says.

"People only have to come down to taste the difference."

Store hours are 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday to Wednesday; 10 a.m. to midnight Thursday through Saturday and 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Sunday. For convenience, customers can fax their orders ahead of time at (905) 702-1177, and in 45 minutes their order will be ready for pickup.
