Halton Hills population to hit 60,000 by 2016

According to 1996 census figures Burlington had a population of 137,000, making it Halton's largest municipality, ranking ahead Oakville's 128,000.

But the Development Charges Study, a joint project involving staff from Halton's planning department and staff from area municipalities, shows Burlington's growth will soon be outstripped by its neighbors.

By 2016, Oakville's population will reach 215,000 while Burlington will lag behind at 179,000. Milton will explode to 84,000 from 32,000 while Halton Hills will grow to 60,000 from 42,000.

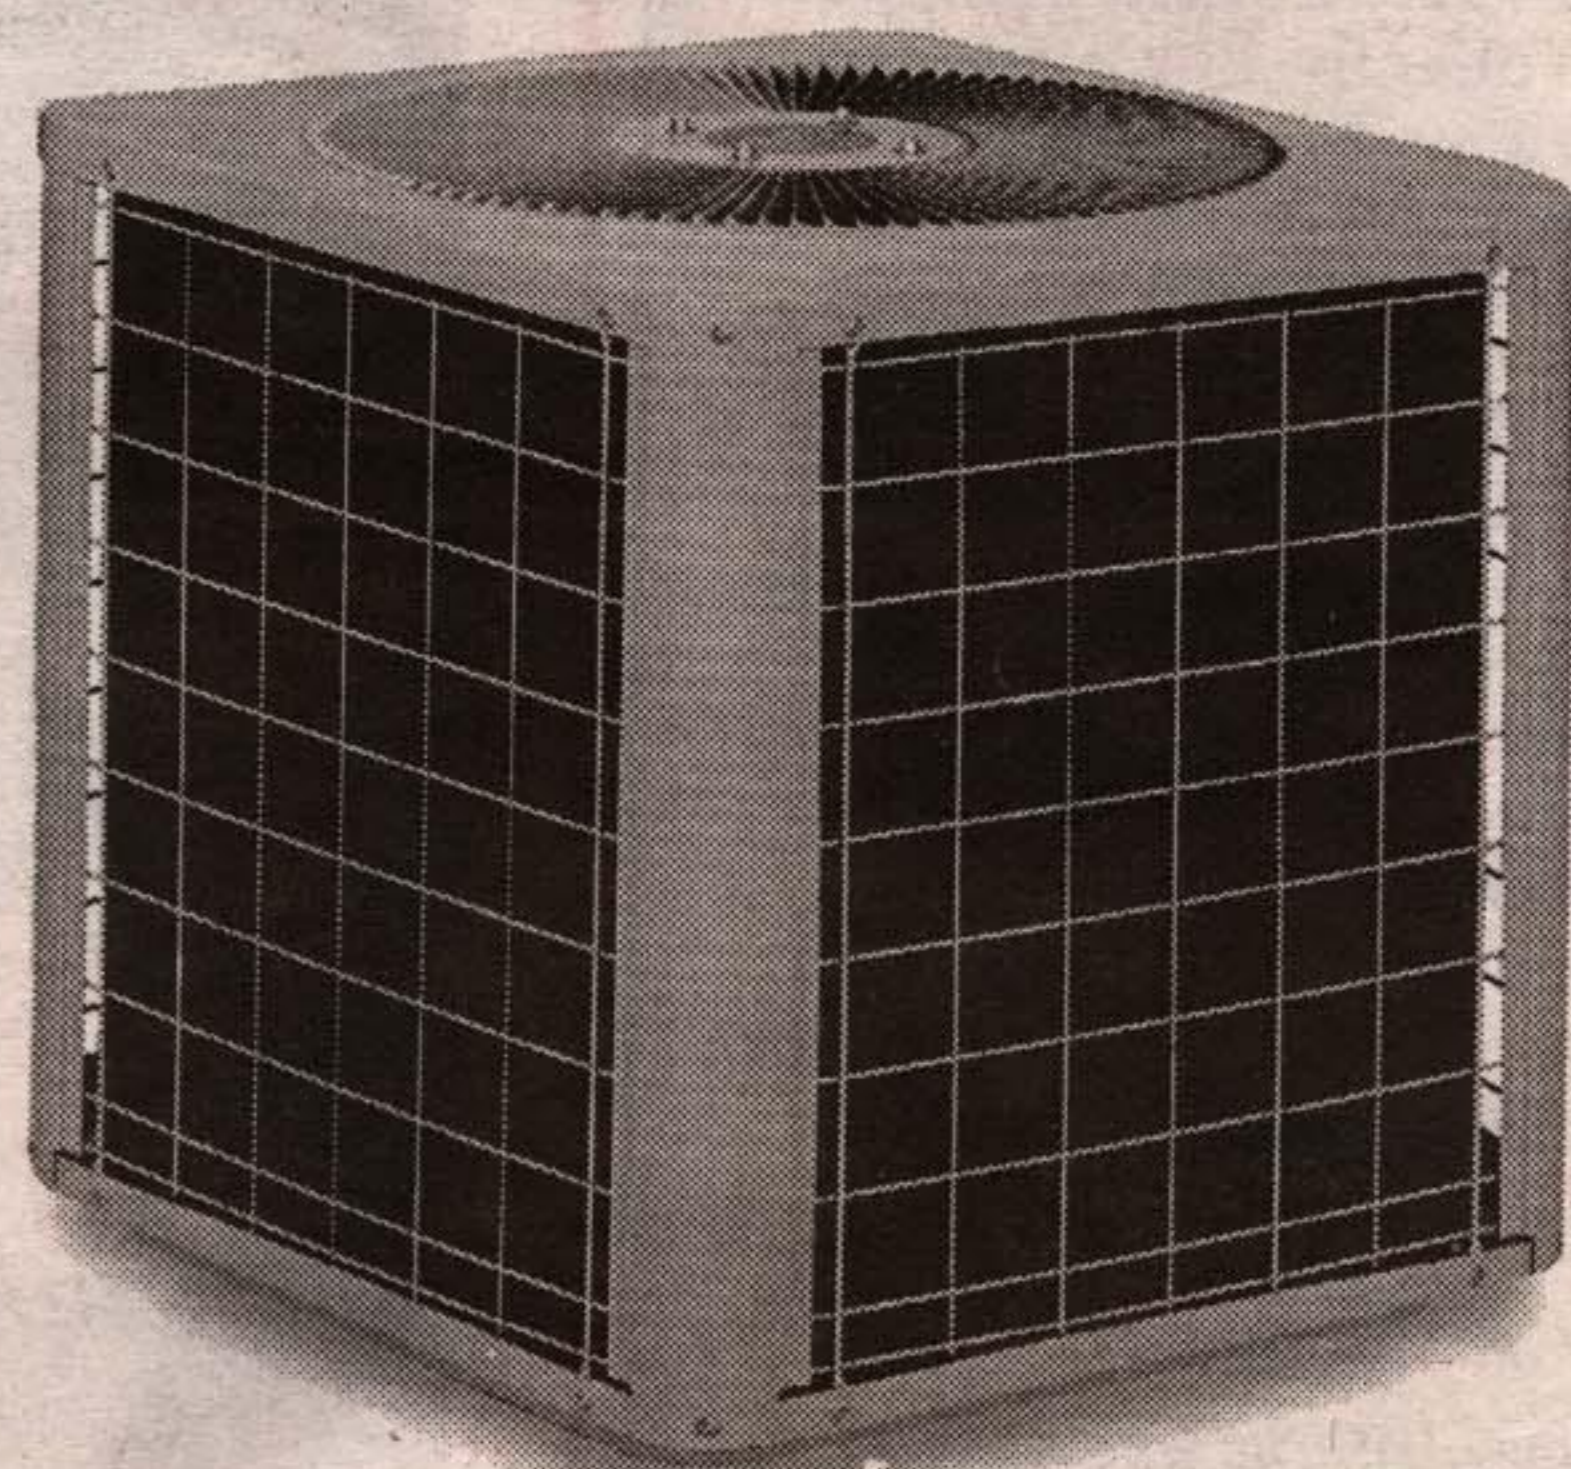

Regional Councillor John Taylor said he isn't surprised at the growth patterns, which depend on water and sewer services being extended north to accommodate large-scale growth in Milton and Oakville.
