Youth picked for exchange to Australia

Sarah Craig Campbell has been watching the Olympics very closely. Not so much for the competitions, but to find out more about the country she will soon be calling home.

In a little over a year, Craig Campbell will be packing for an adventure of a lifetime. She will be moving to Australia for nine months to attend high school.

Craig Campbell found out two weeks ago that she had been accepted to participate in the AFS Interculture Canada International Student Exchange Organization's program.

"Right now I'm more excited than scared," said the Grade 11 student at Georgetown District High School. "To be able to have the chance to do this, I think it will be the most amazing experience living on the other side of the world."

"I wanted to do something new and different. I want to get a better understanding of a different culture because the world is not only Canada or only Georgetown."

The 16-year-old chose Australia as the site of her exchange because of the country's diversity.

"It has everything— cities, mountains, rain forests. It's beautiful and it has exotic animals. It was just everything about it."

Craig Campbell said she's an outgoing person so she doesn't expect to have any trouble making friends. However, she does have some concerns about school.

"Their education system is supposed to be harder than ours and I don't want to fall behind. I'll just have to work my butt off."

That's exactly what Craig Campbell will be doing in preparation for her trip. The exchange will cost $8,900 just for the basics (flight, food, board and education). Spending money will be extra. Craig Campbell is saving money from her part-time job and is sending letters to business and service groups to request donations to help make the trip possible.

Craig Campbell, who hasn't found out where she'll be living yet, doesn't want to miss this opportunity.

"I'll be learning to do things on my own. I'll be going on the plane by myself, living with a family I've never met. I'll learn a lot about myself."
