Since 1994 Close-Link Communications has been a dealer for Bell Mobility, established in Georgetown and owned and operated by Dave & Kathy Close. When the store, located at 330 Guelph Street, first opened they had very few cell phones – the Motorola 550 and the Nokia 100 and a couple of pagers. In 1994 cell phone packages started at $34.95/month, 30 min. included. Now, they can start from $25/month for 200 min. billed by the second.

During the past six years, Close Link Communications has seen a world of change. Bell Mobility built a cellular tower in Georgetown capable of analog and digital service, dramatically improving the reception. With the introduction of Bell Mobility's new digital technology, CDMA, cell phones are able to perform tasks never thought possible. You can now send e-mail, browse the Internet, voice dial, and coming next is video!

In 1998 - 1999 Georgetown Bell Mobility was a part of a pilot project which involved Bell Canada products and services. There was a very limited lineup of land line phones and accessories but it did allow customers to drop off or return phones and pick up new units. As well, we also provide the Bell Sympatico Internet service to residents in the local area.

On April 15, 2000 we earned the title Bell World, combining Bell Mobility and Bell Canada into one. We now sell a full range of Bell Canada products such as Sympatico's High Speed Edition Internet service with speeds up to 1 meg and Smart Touch Features, a wide variety of corded and cordless phones and Bell Mobility products.

Imagine, the little store of only a few phones and a couple of employees now offers hundreds of products and features and employs 12 people. "It has always been about service, that's what separates us from the rest," says Bell World manager Martin Dillon. As a customer once said, "I can buy a phone anywhere these days, but I will never find the level of service like I do at Close Link Communications!"

Dave & Kathy Close and the staff of Bell World Georgetown invite you to join them at Bell World's grand opening October 14-15.
