

Challengers in full organizing mode for federal election

Area candidates are off and running following Sunday's federal election call.

Candidates have been named for the Liberal and Green parties, while the other three parties are gearing up to select their candidates at upcoming nomination meetings.

Liberal Julian Reed, Halton's current MP, is hoping for a third term in office.

The Green Party selected its candidate—Oakville resident Tom Adams—at a meeting Sunday.

Adams is a risk management professional.

Four candidates are seeking the Canadian Alliance nomination in Halton—Clay Downes of Georgetown, Giuseppe Gori of Acton, and Tim Dobson and Stan Lazarski, both of Milton.

Downes is a franchise business owner, Gori, leader of the Ontario Family Coalition Party, is a computer consultant, Dobson is manager of Ontario Power Generation's chemistry department and Lazarski is self-employed.

The Canadian Alliance candidate will be selected at a nomination meeting Monday (October 30) at 7:30 p.m. at Milton District High School.

Prior to that meeting the public can get to know the four candidates at a meeting at St. Volodymyr Cultural Centre in Oakville 7:30 p.m. tomorrow (Thursday).

Burlington resident Brenda Dolling, a retired school teacher, and retired sheet metal worker Albert Tichel of Georgetown are seeking the NDP nomination. The candidate will be selected at a nomination meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight (Wednesday) at the Milton Community Resource Centre.

Brian Penman, president of the PC Riding Association of Halton, said the association will nominate its candidate at a meeting in Milton Saturday morning.

Penman said a number of people have shown interest in being the party's Halton candidate, but would not release names.
