Versatile musicians kick off Arts Alive's Sunday at 3 series

The successful Sunday at 3, a series of Sunday afternoon concerts in Halton Hills Cultural Centre, resume this Sunday (Oct. 29) with Paul and Anna Pacanowski.

Back by popular demand, their program will include music from the classics to ragtime, as these talented musicians perform on piano, flute, clarinet and saxophone.

Sunday at 3 is presented in the Gallery of the Halton Hills Cultural Centre. Doors open at 2:30 p.m. for this hour-long concert, and refreshments will be served. There is no admission charge, but pay-what-you-can. Seating is limited, so come early to avoid being turned away.

Scheduled for upcoming Sunday at 3 events are:

- Nov. 26— Adam Timoon, guitar and vocals. This well-known Toronto entertainer performs his own brand of music and humour.
- Jan. 28— Nathalie Younglai and Catherine Richardson, harp, flute. These talented performers offer an extensive repertoire ranging from the classics to more contemporary music.
- Feb. 25— Neil Perkins and Milan Crepp, two pianos. The performance will include classics as well as some contemporary selections.
- March 25— Tom Leadbeater. From musically-rich Cape Breton, Leadbeater's crystal clear tenor is acclaimed across Canada and the U.S. The program includes traditional and popular Irish music to celebrate the month of the shamrock.

Paul and Anna Pacanowski perform at this weekend's Sunday at 3 in the Gallery of the Halton Hills Cultural Centre.

Arts Alive is a group of volunteers who promote the arts in Halton Hills by presenting a variety of entertainment throughout the year.

New exhibit opens

The Williams Mill Gallery in Glen Williams will be exhibiting the sculptures and drawings of Holly Ferguson.

The show, Figures in Fabric, will open today (Wednesday) October 25 and continue until November 19. Ferguson's work embodies the journey of life and the people she has seen or imagined.

Meet the artist at an opening reception on Saturday, October 28, 2-5 p.m.
