provides the power to beam the signal to the satellite. What we'll be doing now is the rest of the car—the systems around it, the electronics and the control systems."

Caldarelli said he expects to be producing the amplifiers within six months and have the operation fully integrated within a year. CPI is also the world's largest independent supplier of electrical systems for medical X-ray imaging systems. More than 95 per cent of its products are exported and distributed worldwide.

The company has operated in Georgetown since 1955. Previously known as Varian Canada, it changed its name to CPI in 1995 when the company spun off from Varian. It currently has approximately 250 employees in Georgetown.

Caldarelli said the company will fully utilize the basement of its 125,000 square foot facility on River Road to accommodate the new operation. He expects it will have to expand in the future but for now the company has leased a 22,000 square foot facility on Sinclair Avenue which it will use as a warehouse.

The decision to move to Georgetown was based on the cost of business in California and the pre-existing operation in Georgetown.

"It's a type of business that's very difficult to do in the Silicon Valley. It's very expensive and there is a large turnover," Caldarelli said. "We've already got good infrastructure in Georgetown and we understand the business and the technology."

Many of the new jobs will be highly specialized technical positions. CPI is doing a Canada-wide recruitment campaign but is also looking locally for positions that can be filled by people in the area.

THE GLEN WILLIAMS TOWN HALL BOARD would like to invite the residents of Glen Williams to attend the Annual General Meeting of the Town Hall Board on Thursday, November 16th at 7:30 pm in the historic Glen Williams Town Hall.

Immediately after the general business, elections for the Glen Williams Town Hall Board's executive will commence. Following the election, Mark Rowe, noted town historian will present a slide show highlighting the history of the Glen, from both an economical and chronological perspective.

All newcomers are welcome, especially those wanting to get more active in the community.

LOWER DENTURES

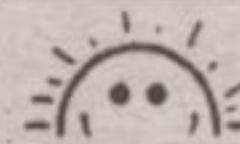

If you are a denture wearer, you will experience some kind of discomfort during the life of your dentures. Lower dentures usually cause more trouble than uppers. Because bottom dentures have little suction to hold them in place, they are more likely to move around, therefore causing various forms of discomfort. Also, poor ridges cause dentures to move easily, because the denture has little to hold onto for stability. The tongue constantly moving as you talk and chew also interferes with the lower dentures. Because of all these factors that effect the function of the lower dentures, most people do have trouble at some point. In fact, many people don't wear their lower dentures. They divorce them from their upper denture mates by loosing them in the most unlikely places! Some seek refuge in the bottom drawers, bottom of the bed, under the bed, amongst lipsticks and combs in ladies' handbags, lunch pails, back pockets, and if they get lucky, they are left forever soaking in a denture bath or cup of water!

SOLUTIONS

There are different techniques that can be used to improve the fit of the lower denture, such as soft-liner insert. This is a permanent liner that will stay soft and give added comfort and stability. For more information, contact our office. We specialize in problem lower dentures. Consultations are always free.

You do not need a referral; simply call our office direct.
